

My sad cat.

Okay, my cat was sad when I came home. He looked like he was depressed, so I tried to cheer him up with food and toys. Everything I tried didn't work.

Since nothing worked I took him to the vet. She said, "Oh, he's all good, nothing wrong with him."

So I started to get worried and he got mad and more depressed. He didn't look good and maybe a bit grouchy or tired. So we went for a walk downtown and he was not enjoying his walk!

We went to a cat cafe but nothing that would get him out of his mood. We tried everything he was the same miserable cat! He started to fight with the other cats so we had to leave the cafe.

As we were leaving, I started to pay with my cash, he was angry, so I threw him out the window. But don't worry, cats can land on their feet. I took him to the vet once again they said nothing. What's wrong Okay my cat!

I got him a new friend but he didn't like it. So I brought him a lot of toys and a cappuccino from Starbucks. My head started to hurt, so I took him for a walk everywhere but I had to drag him because he was so sad that he didn't want to walk.

So when it turned to midnight, I brought him inside, but he was still in a bad mood. I made myself a coffee and to my surprise he drank it. He turned back into my good cat again. I learned later that he was a two cups of coffee per day feline with potential attitude.
